Democrats Quash Early Voting, For Now

In what can only be described as a blatant effort to keep voters who may not support their candidates away from the polls, the Warrick County Democrat Party has denied the voters of Warrick County access to satellite offices in Newburgh and Lynnville for the 2010 election cycle. Rest assured that the Warrick County Republican Party will continue with its efforts to insure that the voters of Warrick County, regardless of political affiliation, are not disenfranchised by the efforts of the Democrat leadership. We are presently reviewing our options in response to the Democrats attempts to block early voting in all parts of the County except in Boonville. We, the voters of Warrick County, can send a message to the Democrats that we won't tolerate their interference with our right to vote by turning each and every one of them out of office in November. As has been the practice for the last year, doors will open at 7:30am, with breakfast served at 8:00 and a meeting at 8:30. Sue Ellspermann to Remain on the Ballot

On March 5th, the Indiana Election Commission rejected a challenge to the candidacy of Sue Ellspermann to run on the Republican ticket in the 2010 primary election. Sue's candidacy was challenged by longtime Democrat donor and supporter Charles Wyatt of Boonville. Sue also faces opposition in the primary from an unknown candidate, Angela Sowers of Boonville, who filed for election on the last day before the noon deadline. The Warrick County Central Committee supports and endorses Sue in her bid to unseat Russ Stillwell in November. For more information on this story, check out the following links:
